

La Biennale Friday Highlights

August 15, 2013

By lance aram rothstein

Just a few quick highlights from our first day at the 55th Art Biennale in Venice.

We woke up late as usual, not good when trying to cram in as much art as possible. I'll include many, many more examples and other artists in my comprehensive review later next week.

But for now, here's a glimpse of what we encountered

Our first stop was at The Museum of Everything where we had nice coffee & cakes before seeing the magnificent paintings of Italian "Outsider" artist Carlo Zinelli in their back garden:

Then we moved quickly over to the Giardini where we hit the pavilions of Spain, Belgium & Holland before entering the main exhibition hall.
